

Contributors

Yair Auron is a professor at the Israeli Open University and also teaches at Kibbutzim College. His research addresses the study and teaching of genocide, the attitude of the state of Israel to genocides other than the Holocaust, and contemporary Judaism. He heads an Israeli project for the teaching of the phenomenon of genocide.

Email: yairau@openu.ac.il

Yehuda Bauer is professor (emeritus) at the Institute of Contemporary Jewry of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. An Israel Prize laureate in the field of Holocaust Studies, he is the Academic Adviser to Yad Vashem and a member of the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities. His most recent book is The Death of the Shtetl (Yale UP, 2009).

Email: bauer1926@yahoo.com

Donald Bloxham is professor of modern history at the University of Edinburgh. His research addresses how genocide is planned, prepared and represented, and how its perpetrators are punished.

Email: Donald.Bloxham@ed.ac.uk

Rivka Brot is a doctoral student at the Zvi Meitar Center of the Tel Aviv University Faculty of Law. She studies the trials of Jews accused of collaboration in community courts in displaced persons camps in Europe and in criminal courts in Israel.

Email: rivka.brot@gmail.com

Annegret Ehmman is founder of the Memorial and Educational Site of the House of the Wannsee Conference in Berlin and served as its Director of Education from 1986 to 1999. She lectures in teacher training programs and works as a historian and independent scholar in Berlin, concentrating on German, Jewish and European history and historical-political education.

Email: annegret.ehmann@reimer-it.de

Federico Finchelstein is associate professor of history at the New School for Social Research and its Eugene Lang College, where he serves as director of the Janey Program in Latin American Studies. His research topics include racism, the Holocaust, Jewish history in Latin America and in Europe, and Latin American fascism and populism.

Email: finchelf@newschool.edu

Jeffrey Herf is professor of modern Jewish history at the University of Maryland at College Park. His field is twentieth-century German political and intellectual history, with a focus on Nazi propaganda in Europe and beyond.

Email: jherf@umd.edu

Gavriel D. Rosenfeld is associate professor and director of the undergraduate Jewish studies program at Fairfield University, Connecticut. He studies the history and memory of Nazi Germany and the Holocaust.

Email: grosenfeld@fairfield.edu

Eliezer Schwartz was deported to Auschwitz in 1944 at the age of 16. He earned a Masters of Science in Urban and Regional Planning at the Technion–Israel Institute of Technology and a PhD in Jewish history from Haifa University. He wrote his dissertation on the role played by military industries in the Final Solution and the use of Jewish forced laborers by the German Reich during the final stage of World War II.

Batya Shimony holds a doctorate in literature. She teaches Hebrew Literature at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev and at Achva College. Her research interests include Mizrahi and gender issues, the first generation of Mizrahi literature, the manner in which Holocaust memory is presented and perceived by Mizrahi authors, and the representation of the Holocaust in contemporary Mizrahi literature.

Email: shimonyb@bgu.ac.il

Katrin Stoll holds a PhD from Bielefeld University in Germany. She is a visiting fellow at the German Institute of History in Warsaw and is engaged in a postdoctoral study of Professor Shimon Datner, a Polish-Jewish historian who survived the Holocaust. Her research interests are Holocaust historiography and the trials of Nazi criminals in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Email: stoll@dhi.waw.pl

Mikhail Tyaglyy is a research fellow at the Ukraine Center for Holocaust Study in Kiev. He edits the journal Holocaust and Modernity: Studies in the Ukraine and the World. His work focuses on Nazi anti-Jewish and anti-Roma policy in the Ukraine during World War II.

Email: mikhail.tyaglyy@gmail.com

Avichai Zur holds an MA from the Department of Jewish Thought at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He has studied the thought of Rabbi Zadok Ha-Cohen of Lublin, comparing his ideas on the question of evil in the world with ideas in the area of critical theory.

Email: avichai.zur@gmail.com

